

The Case of the Corrupted Chicken

Ivan Kwan · Joshua Kong · Zachary Teo · David Ho

Illustrated By David Ho

Will you do the right thing
even if no one is watching?

One sunny Saturday,
Tom went to the coffee shop
to buy lunch.

He saw a HUGE sign at the entrance that read
“Best Food Stall Contest!”

MR YEO

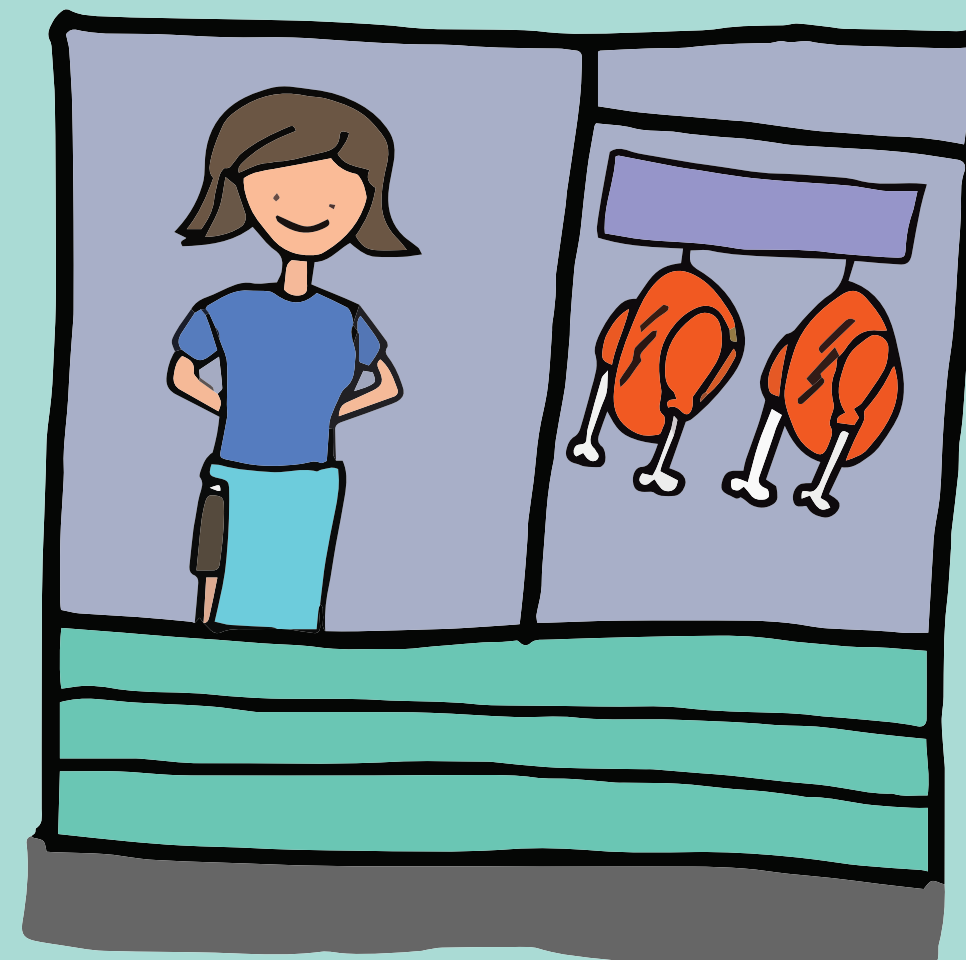

A

C

MRS LEE

“let’s see, there are two stalls, one by Mr Yeo and the other by Mrs Lee. They both sell chicken rice!”, Tom said.

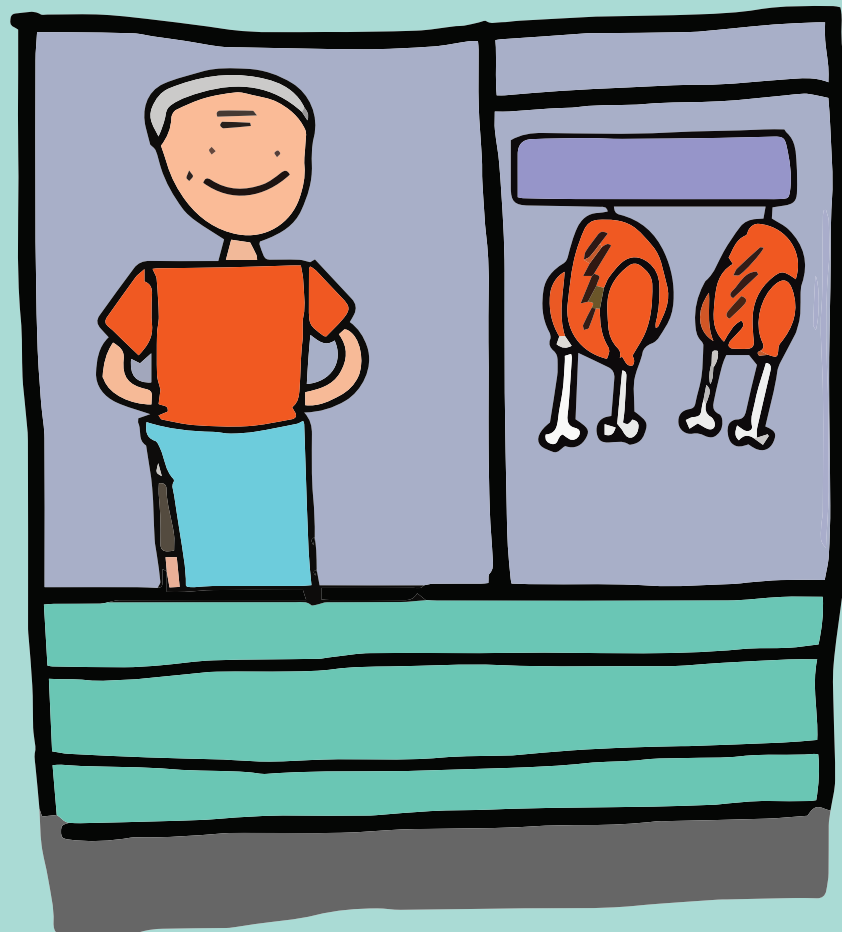

MR YEO

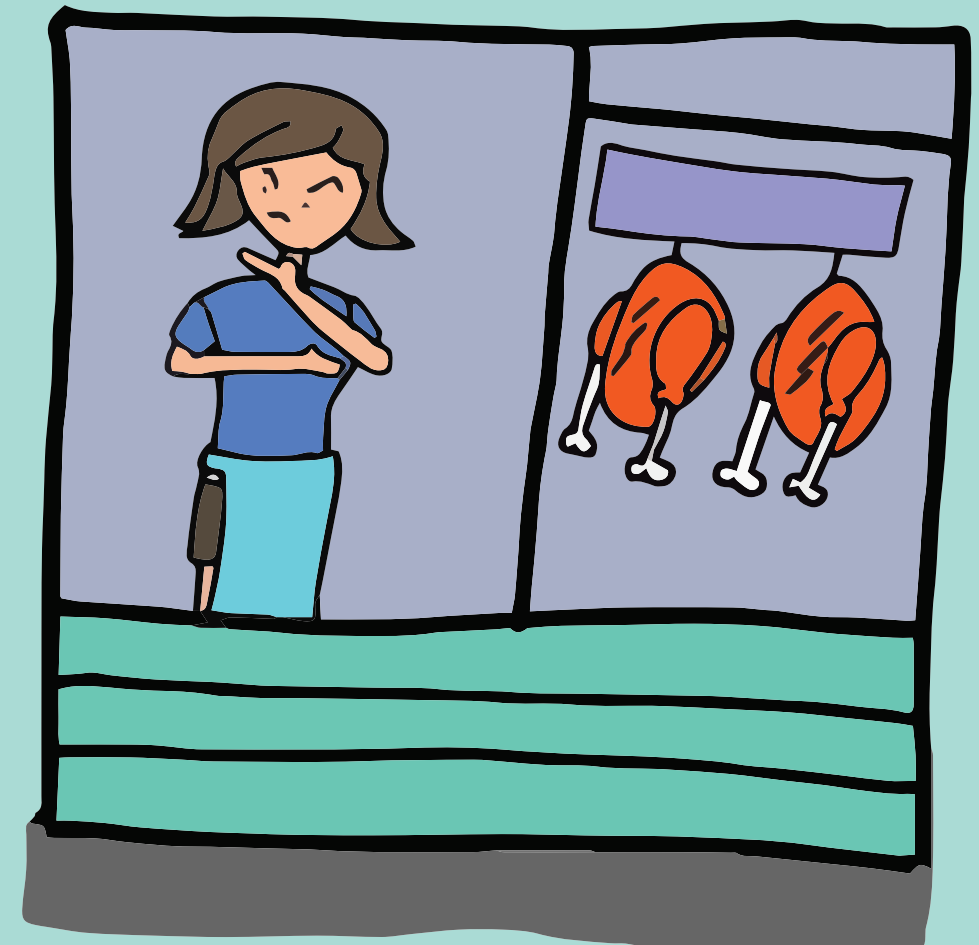

A

C

MRS LEE

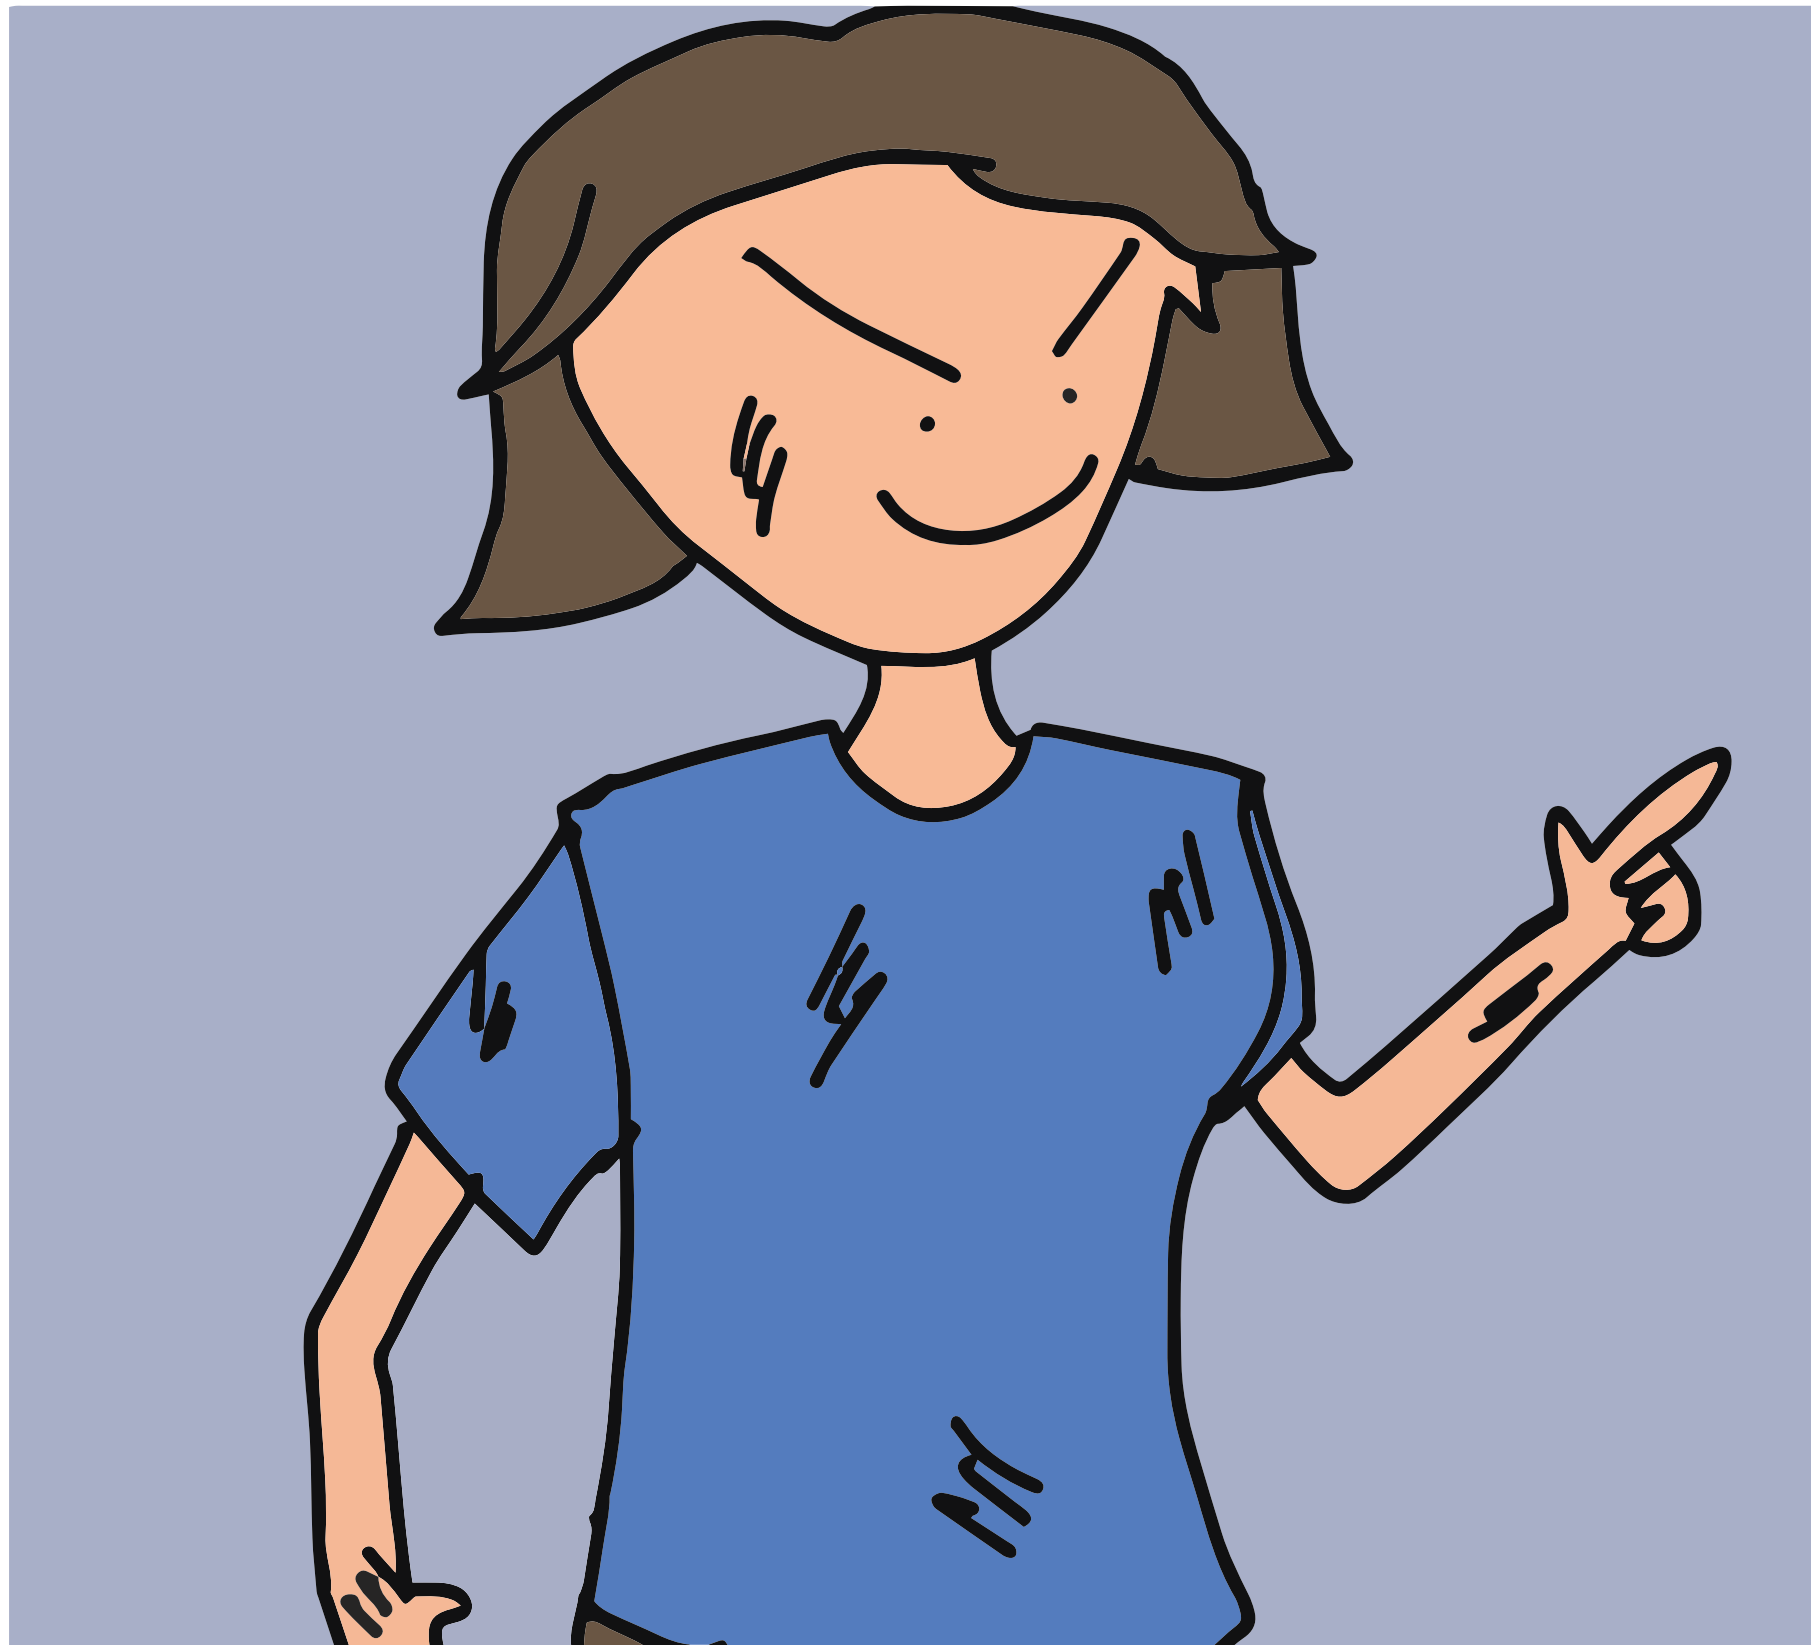

“Hmph! I’ll do whatever it takes to win!”, Mrs Lee said to herself.

“My stall is so dirty...
hmm... what can I do
to make everyone
buy from my stall?”

“Got it! I will serve a lot more chicken
than Mr Yeo! It is dirty but at least I
will win.”

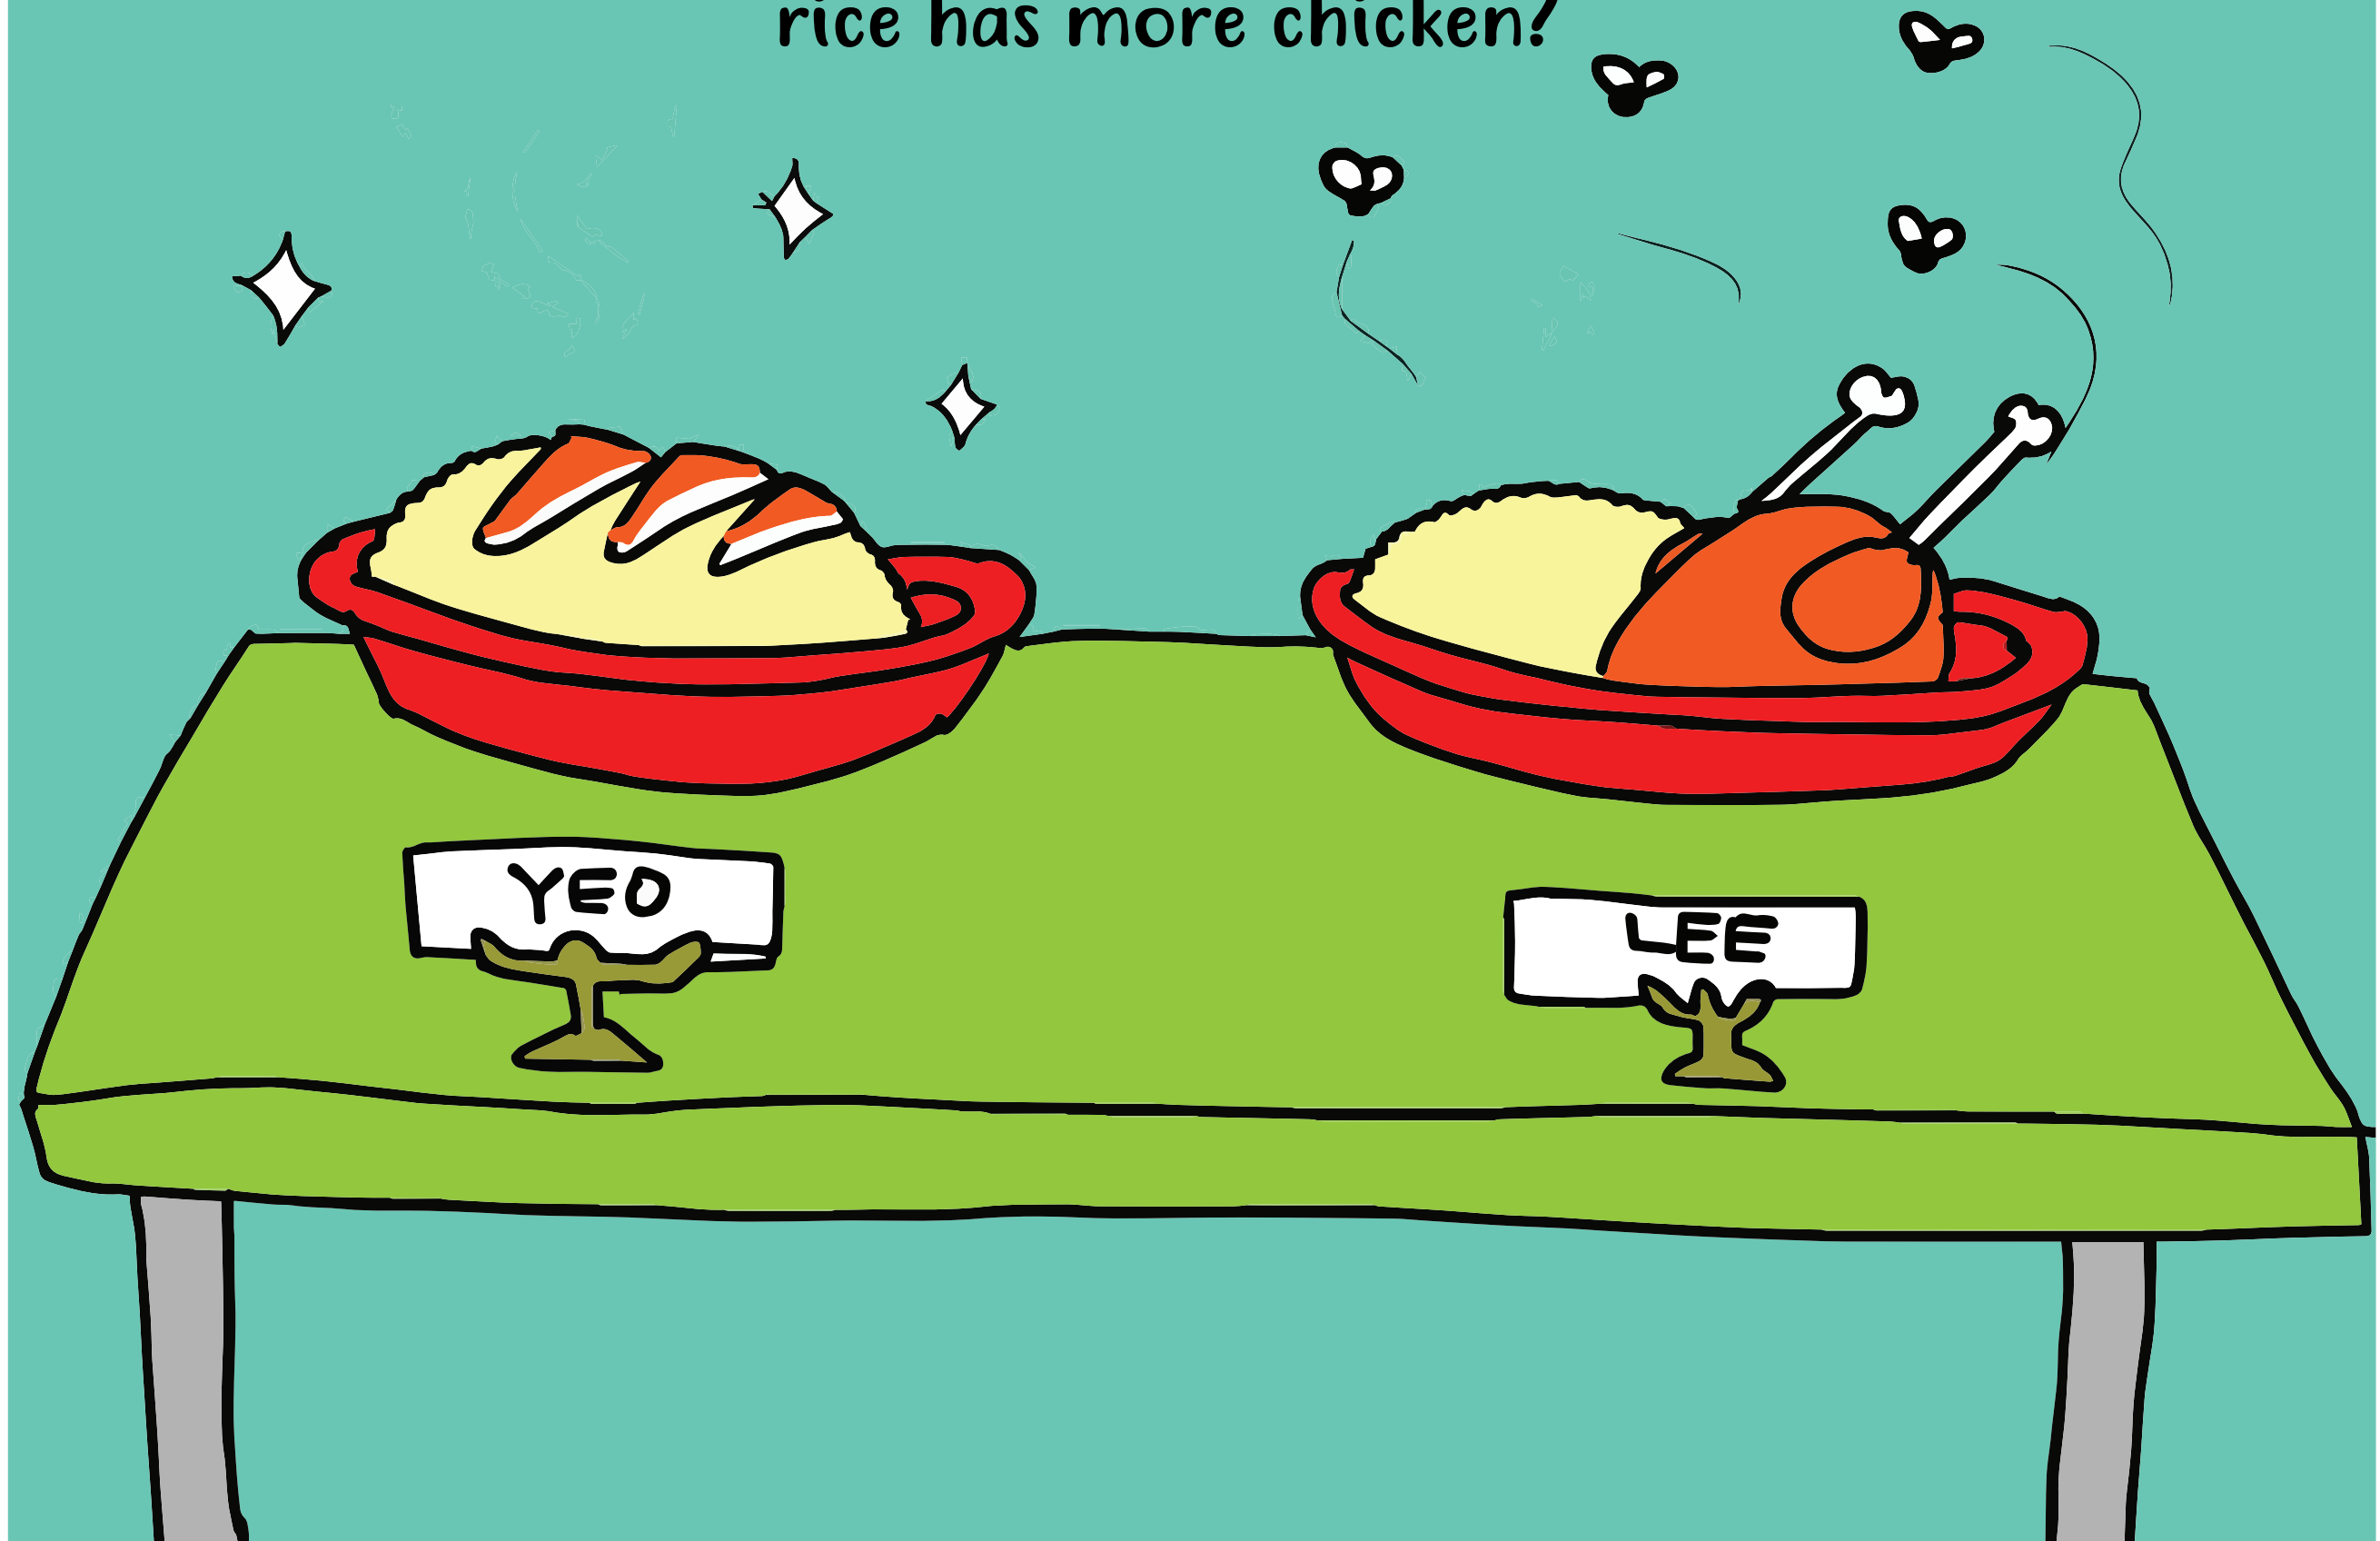

Wait! What is that?

STOP! Don't turn the page yet.
What is the problem here?

Which plate of chicken
rice has more chicken?

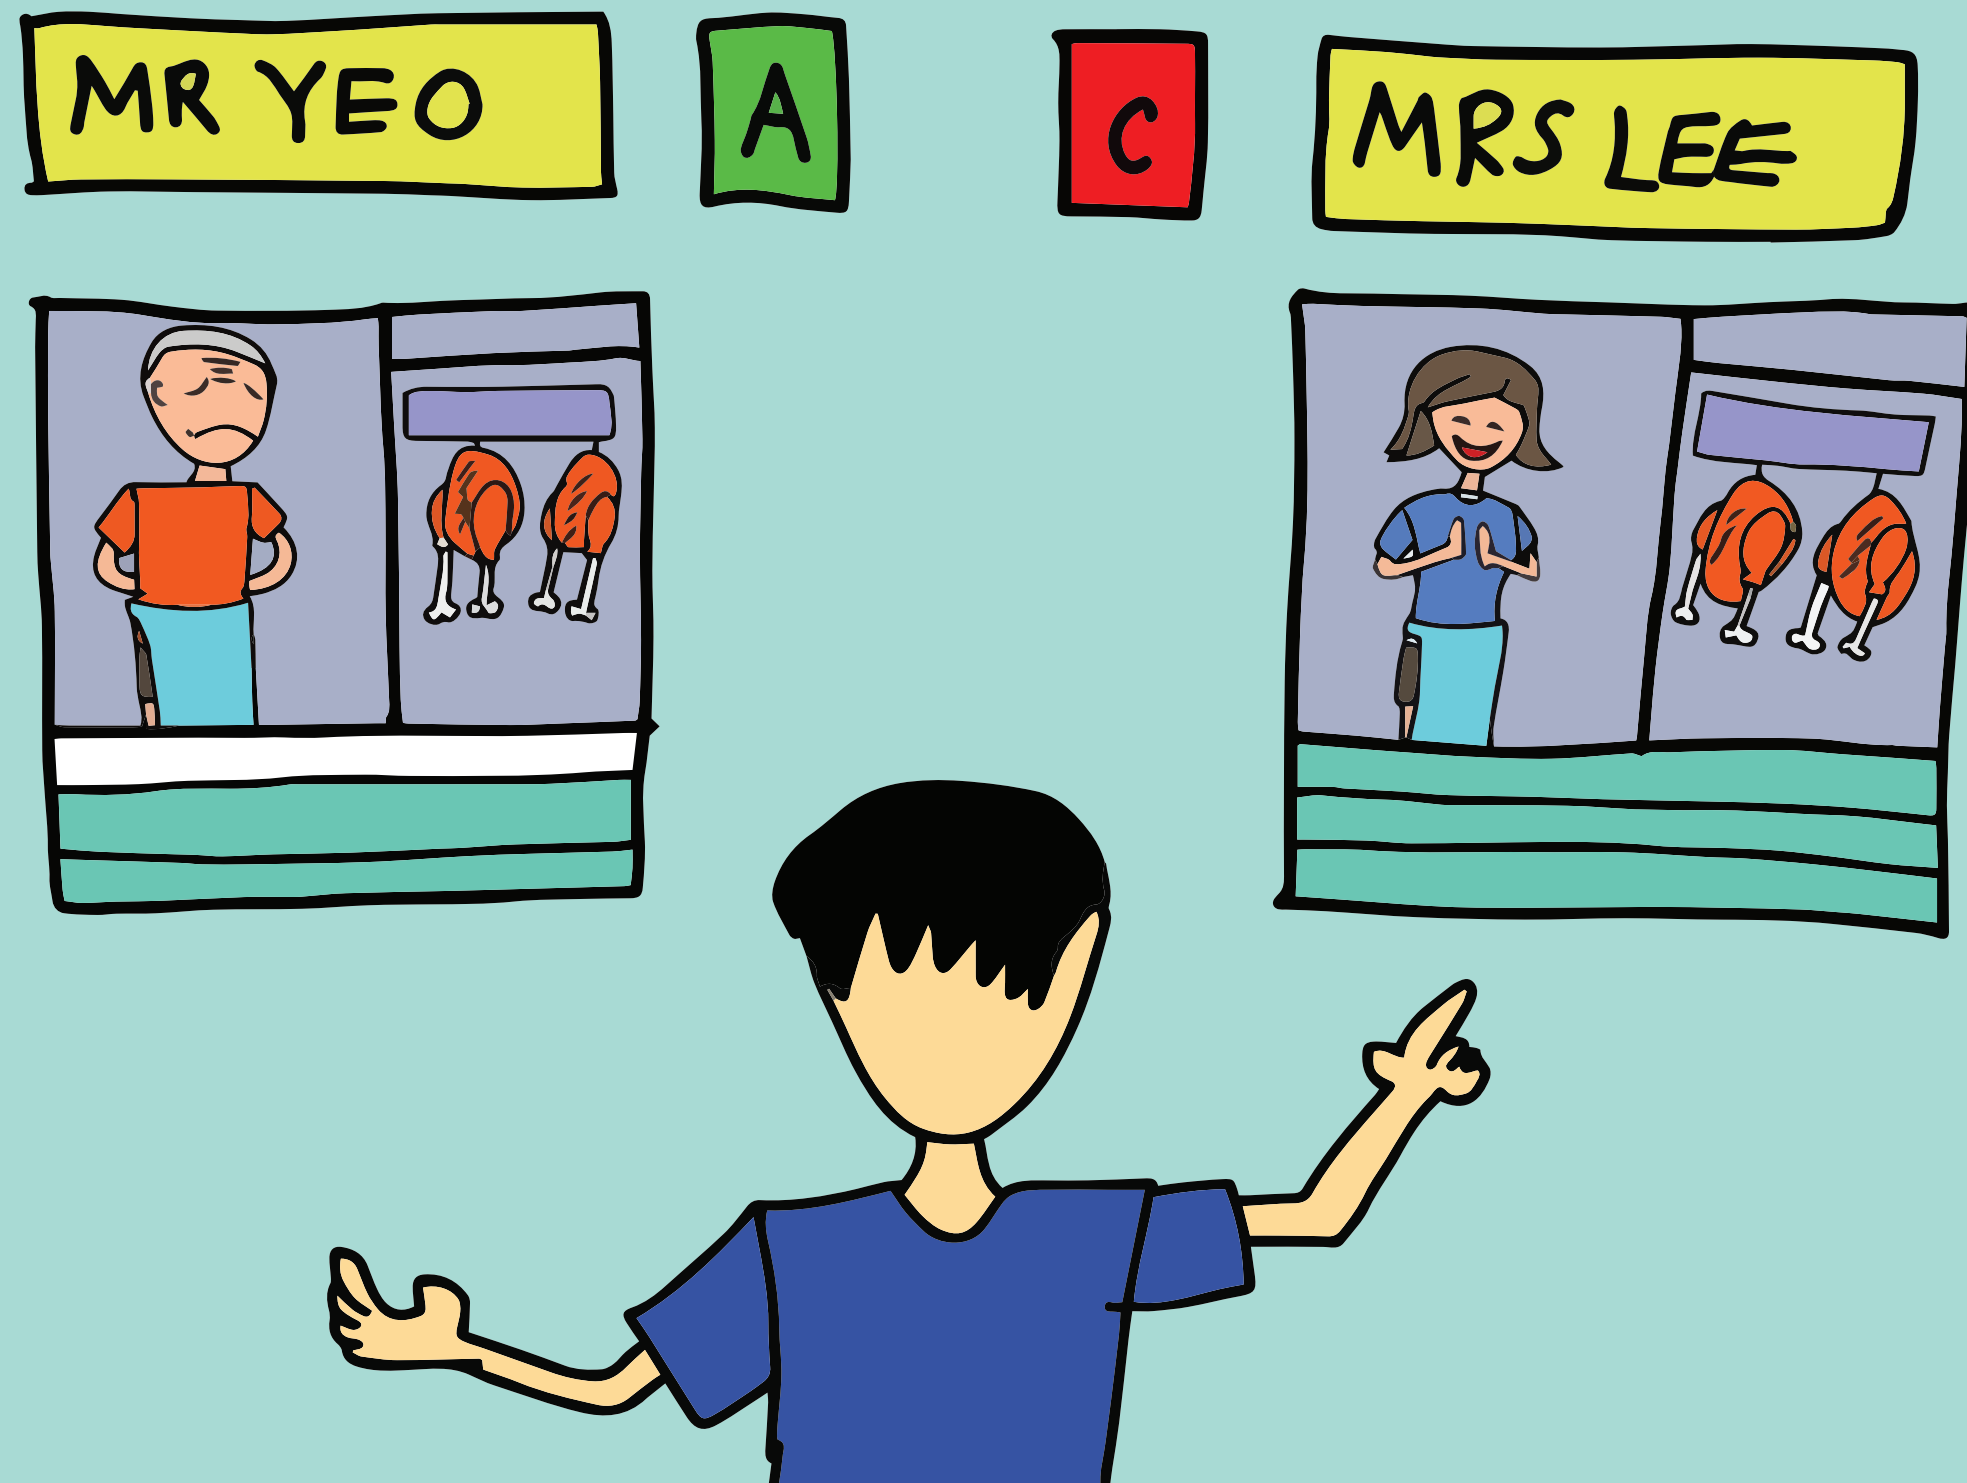

“Should I go for Mr Yeo’s or Mrs Lee’s chicken rice?” Tom thought to himself.

“I see that Mrs Lee
offers more chicken!
I will go for her
stall!”

That night, Tom had a bad tummy-ache!

What could have caused this?

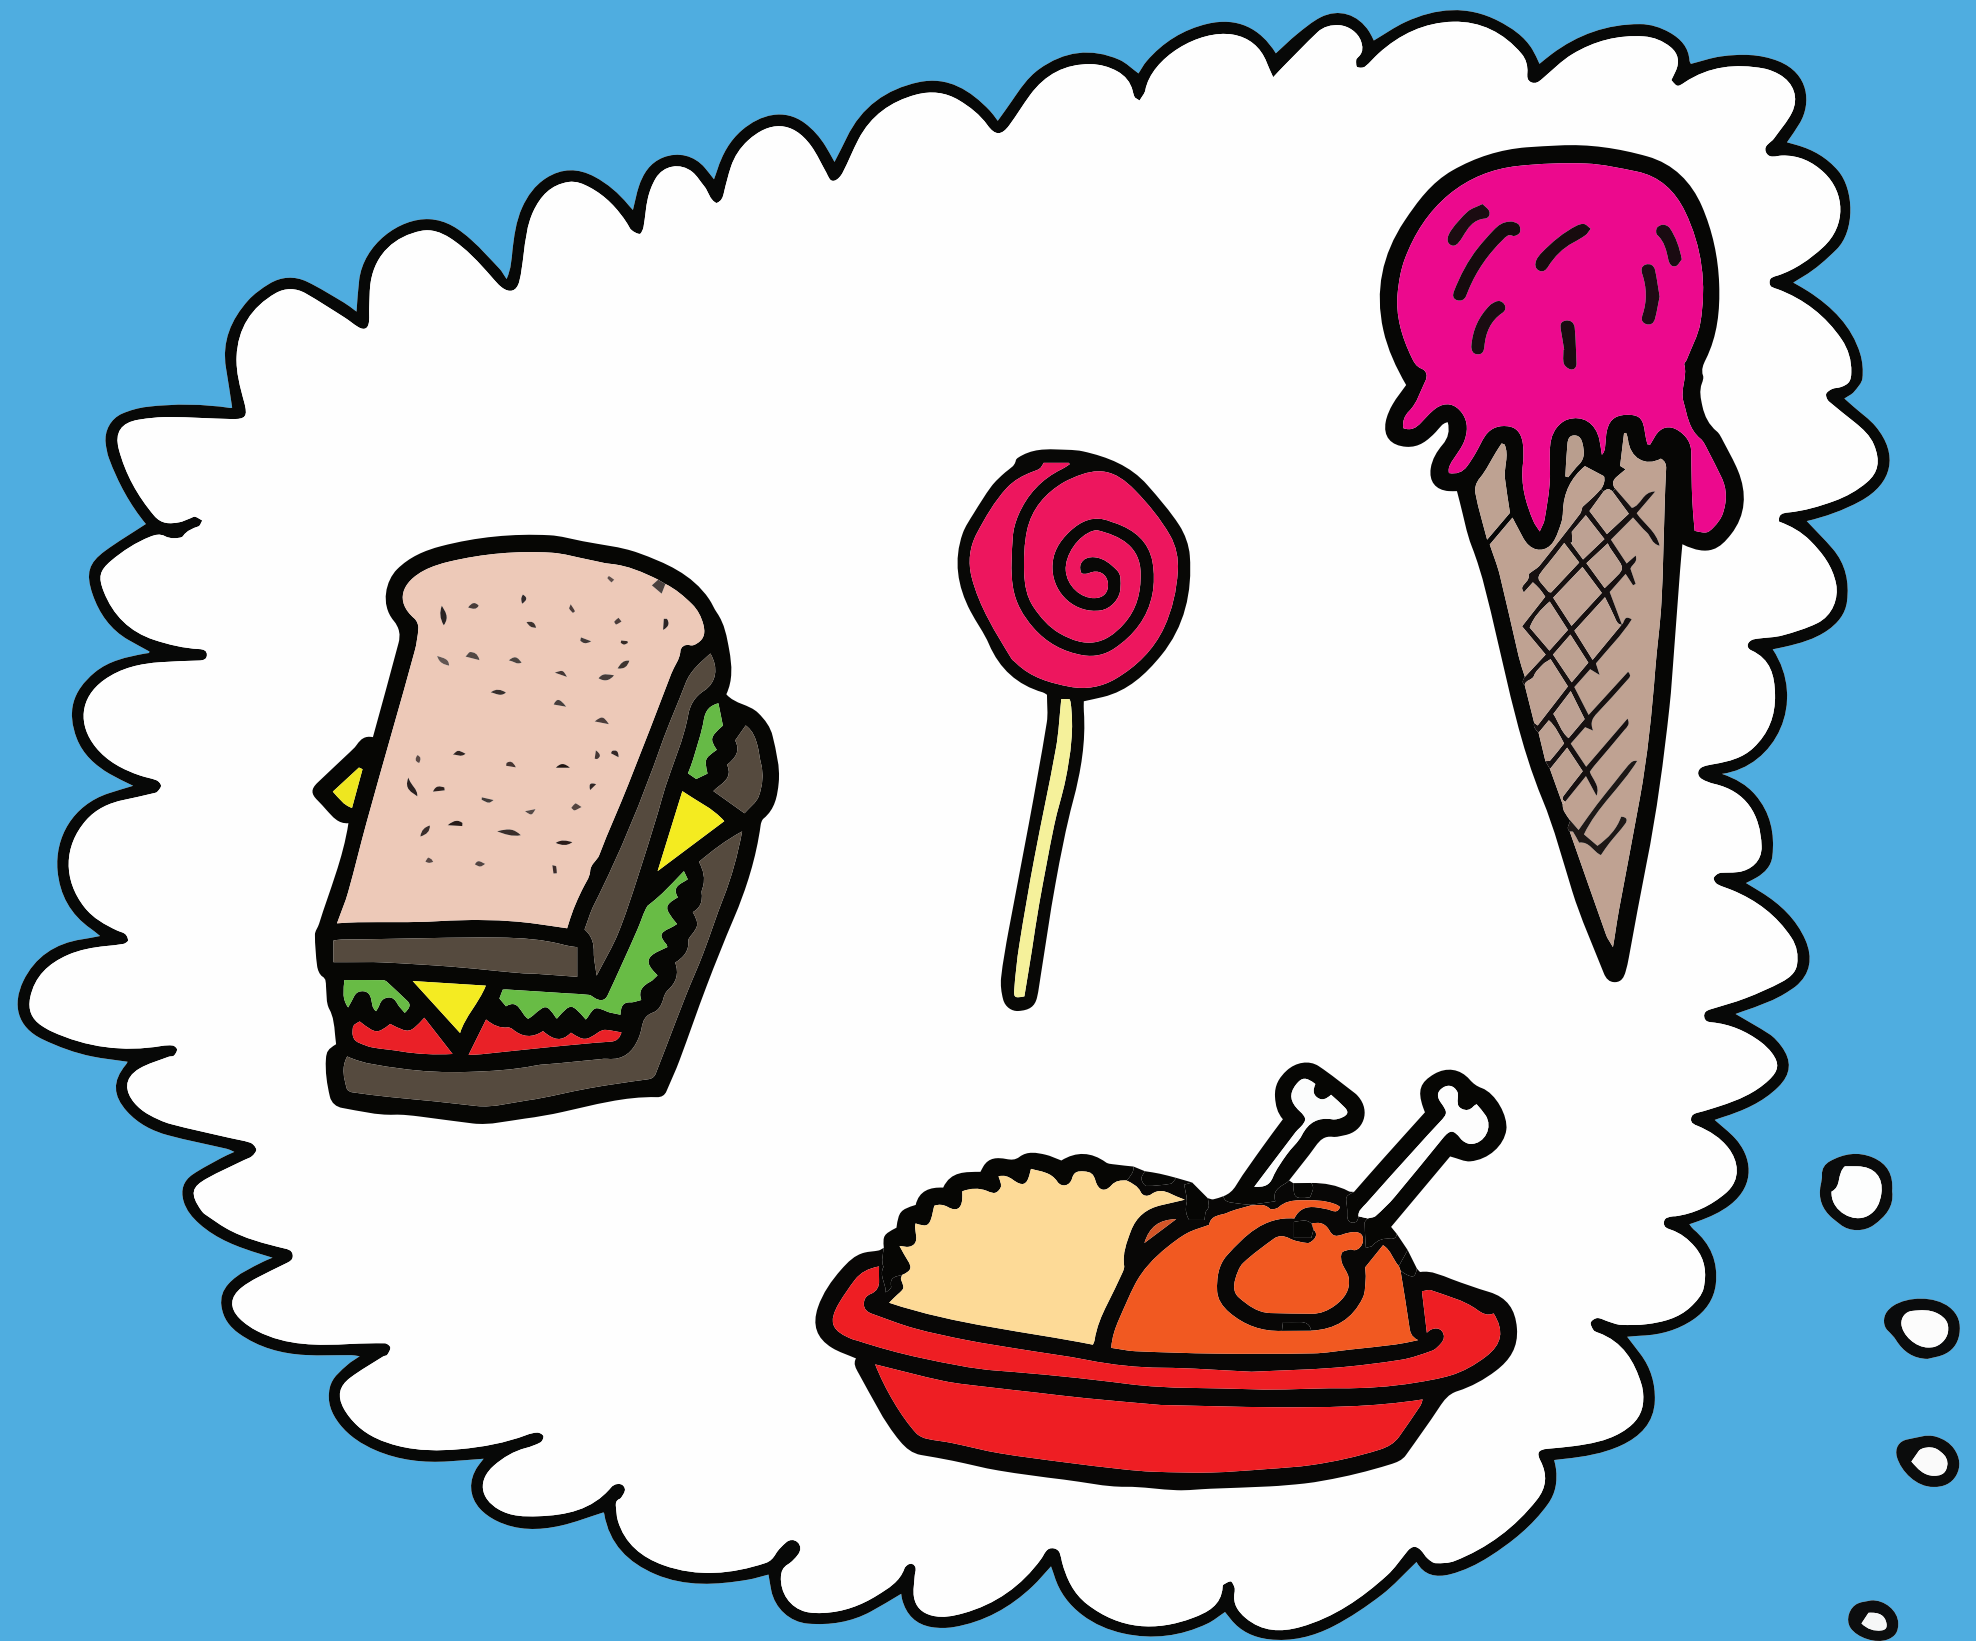

STOP!

Don't turn the page yet. What do you think could have caused Tom's tummy-ache?

Think about it!

What did Tom
eat today?

“Oh no! It must have been Mrs Lee’s chicken
rice that caused my tummy-ache! There were flies on it!”

No matter how much chicken Mrs Lee gave -
her food was dirty! It was not safe to eat!

The next morning,
Tom was feeling
much better. He was also very angry!

He decided to confront Mrs Lee about
the dirty chicken.

Tom went to Mrs Lee
and told her that her
food was dirty.

Just then, another lady walked up and started arguing with Mrs Lee.

Mrs Lee felt guilty
and said that she
prepared the food
when she was sick.

Look! Her stall, utensils
and clothes were so dirty! No wonder
people fell sick!

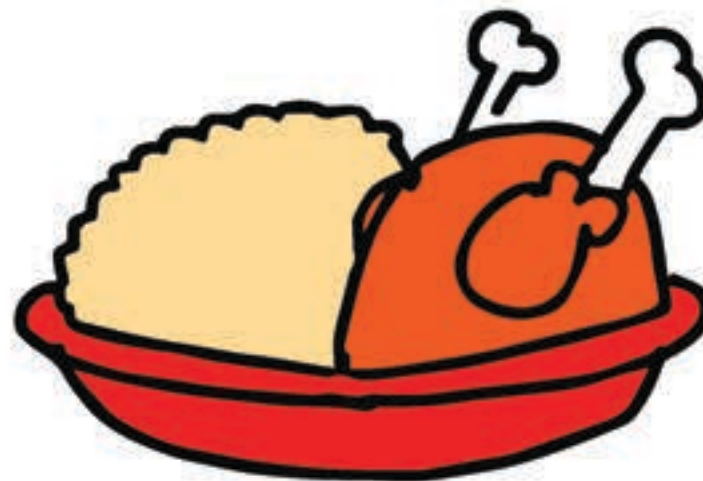

In the end, Mr Yeo
won the
competition!

Mrs Lee also had to pay a $500 fine
and received a
Health Standards
Rating of D.

For Discussion

- a) Did Mrs Lee do the right thing when she served more chicken to her customers even though her kitchen was very dirty? Why, or why not?
- b) If you were Mrs Lee, what would you have done?

THE END

In collaboration with

